PRONOUNS

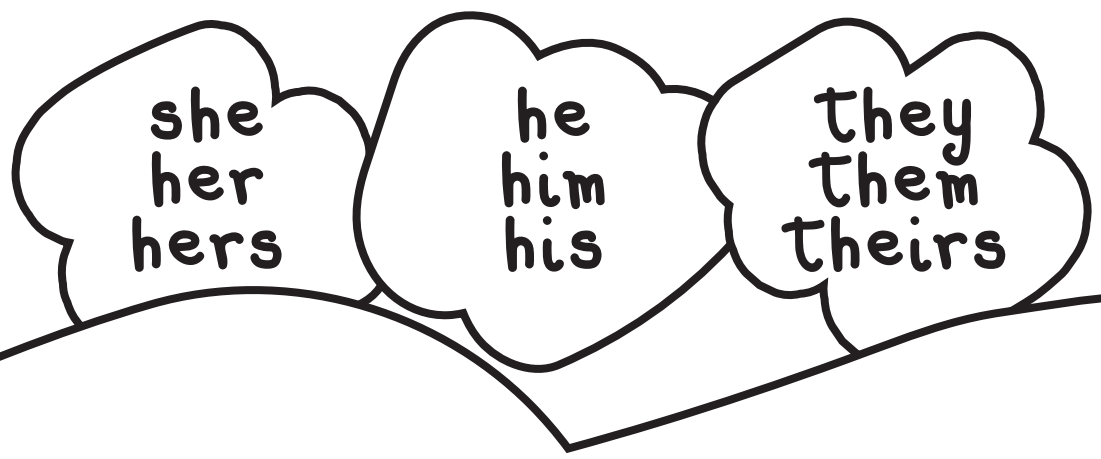
Pronouns are the words we use to refer to people instead of their names.
They often have gender implications when we use them, such as she or him.

Everyone has pronouns they prefer to be called by.

Some people may ask to be addressed by specific pronouns.

We can't always tell someone's gender by their name, or by looking at them. Using a they / them pronoun before you know their preferred pronouns is a helpful way to avoid making a mistake.

COMMON PRONOUNS



NEO-PRONOUNS

Neo-pronouns are new pronouns created by trans, non-binary and intersex communities to speak to their particular experiences of gender.

MORE THAN ONE PRONOUN

Some people may wish to use more than one pronoun to talk about themselves.
These can be a combination of the above, for example:
